What can you read?

Apart from books, what else can you read. Write down whatever comes to your mind.

I've prepared a list of examples and collocations on the next slide (from the more obvious choices, even to some less common collocations). Check it out and compare if you have similar ideas. Did you think of something else?

If there's something on the list you are not familiar with, give it a quick google search. :)

Things you can read

Here are a few examples:

kinds of books

a novel, a short story, a historical book, a biography, an autobiography, a detective book, a comic book, a fantasy book, a horror story, a love story, a textbook, a workbook, an audiobook, a manual, an atlas, a guide book, a cook book, a self-help book (motivační knížka), the Bible, a collection of poems, a dictionary, an encyclopaedia, other materials - a note, a love note, a letter, a code (of law), a map, a magazine, lyrics (of a song), a menu, a postcard, road signs, online stuff - an e-mail, a text (an sms), a tweet, a post, a comment, a caption, an article, an e-book, subtitles, some extra collocations - read people (=vidět do lidí, poznat, když někdo lže), read the room (=přečíst místnost - uvědomit si s kým mluvím, jejich emoce a upravit to co říkám, aby mě pochopili a nikoho jsem se nedotkl), read into something too much (=vidět v něčem více, než v tom ve skutečnosti je).

How would you answer the following questions?

- Have you ever lost a book from the library?
- Are you reading a book at the moment?
- Have you read a book in English? What was it?
- What sort of books do you like reading?
- Do you subscribe to some printed (or online) media?
- Have you ever lent a book to someone and never got it back / vice versa?
- Did you get/give a book as a Christmas present last year?

Inexact numbers

The name “inexact numbers” sounds quite weird, however, it’s actually super simple. What it means is that you’re not saying the exact number.

Here are some examples to show you what I have in mind - instead of saying: “There were five people.”, you can say: “There were a couple people.” Super simple, right?

More examples follow:

A couple, a bunch, a few, several, some, loads of, lots of, I’ll be there at around 8.30., about 100 dollars, ten minutes or so, She is 30-ish (thirty-ish) - je jí okolo 30, etc.

As you can see, we use them with things, money, time, age and so much more.

Look at the pic for one minute. Then cover it and try to remember what you have seen (feel free to use “inexact numbers” in your sentences).

I know, you've just looked at one picture and now there are two more but bear with me. :)

Look at the two following pictures. They are pictures of the same event taken a few minutes apart. Try to find at least 5 differences. Try to describe what the people are doing, have already done and are about to do. As usual, key is on the next slide.

Describing a picture - key

He's about to (/going to) eat the cake.

They're talking.

She's blowing out the candles.

She's sitting.

Her left hand is on the table

The hat's on the table

The couple on the far left is holding hands.

He's eaten the cake.

They're hugging.

She's going to blow out the candles.

She's walking away from the table.

She's waving.

The hat's on her head.

The couple isn't holding hands.

OK, here is one last picture. :) Choose one of the two pictures saying goodbye and write a short conversation that you think the people could be having. :)

Saying goodbye

Listen to four conversations (attached in module 5). In which two do the people know each other very well?

Saying goodbye

Listen to four conversations (attached in module 5). In which two do the people know each other very well?

Conversation 1 & 4

Listen to the four conversations again. In which one does somebody:

- Compliment the other person?
- Thank the other person?
- Talk about another meeting?
- Send a message to somebody else?
- Talk about the trip back?

Listen to the four conversations again. In which one does:

- Compliment the other person? 2 (I've enjoyed working with you.)
- Thank the other person? 1, 2, 3
- Talk about another meeting? 2, 4 (See you soon.)
- Send a message to somebody else? 3, 4
- Talk about the trip back? 2, 4

There are a lot of ways to say goodbye, check out the link to see some examples (on each card there is the beginning of the phrase on one side and the end on the other)
Which of the following phrases do you use?

Yaaaas! You've done it! Good job if you're reading this.

Thank you for taking your time to answer all the questions, describe all the pictures, watch the videos, do the exercises and listenings and engage in the online quizzes. I hope it has given you what you were hoping for and it felt like it was time well spent.

If you feel like it, you can let me know whether this was helpful in the google classroom, through email or on Portal (hodnocení).
